Choosing The Right Guest Ranch For Your Vacation

If this is what you're looking for then here's what you really need to know about guest or dude ranch vacations. They all offer riding, a lodging and meal plan, and a host of other activities ranging from fishing to boating. The real differences are in what's emphasized, the location, what's included in the cost, and how guests are treated. Here's what to ask about and to look for:

- What do they emphasize? If you want to do a lot of riding, with progressive instruction to develop your riding skills and confidence, then Greenhorn is your choice because our riding program accommodates all levels of experience, ages six to adult. We also have one of the few programs encouraging trotting and loping!

- Where are they located? Do you want mountains, forest, high plains, or desert for your ranch vacation? And how far can you travel? Greenhorn is surrounded by the Sierra Nevada and Cascade mountains. We are a reasonable drive from much of California, Nevada, and Oregon, and just 90 minutes from Reno International Airport.

- What's included in the cost? Knowing what is, and is not included, is the only way to really compare cost and vacation value. Most guest ranch vacations generally include lodging, food and some activities. At Greenhorn, our emphasis is on riding and our price includes group lessons and trail rides every day.

- How are guests treated? Greenhorn is an intimate ranch experience. You eat, ride, and relax with the owners, the wranglers, and staff. We pay special attention to kids and teens; including them in activities and doing everything possible to make sure they are having fun. At Greenhorn you are staying in our home, which means you are treated as family!

“My friend and her mom took me to Greenhorn twice so far and it’s better then Disneyland. I’ve never been anywhere more fun then Greenhorn”
